Key Deliverables for 2015 Ministerial

CAFF's Arctic Biodiversity Assessment and the Circumpolar Biodiversity Monitoring Program are two key contributions towards understanding changes in the natural environment, what is causing those changes, how those changes affect human use of living resources and ultimately the development for peoples of the North.

After its release at the last Ministerial, the Arctic Biodiversity Assessment has moved to an implementation stage. Results from the implementation plan will be a key CAFF contribution to the 2015 Ministerial. The Arctic Biodiversity Congress will bring together scientific, industry and policy leaders to discuss ABA results and concrete actions for implementation across countries and industries.

The Circumpolar Biodiversity Monitoring Program is coordinating and feeding harmonized and integrated biodiversity monitoring information into Arctic Council process and other relevant international fora.

These activities will create a dynamic process in which information remains up-to-date, relevant and easily accessed by scientists, decision makers and Arctic residents. Reporting will include a suite of well-established communications products as well as the Arctic Biodiversity Data Service.

In addition, a range of other deliverables will contribute to Canadian Chairmanship priorities, including an Arctic TEEB scoping study, continued work on the incorporation of TEK into Arctic Council work, mainstreaming activities and new partnerships and projects that focus on migratory birds.
